

Dear Diary,

Today Father left early because there was a meeting of the militia. Last night I heard mother and father arguing. Father was saying what a tyrant King George is but mother was saying he was only doing what kings were supposed to do. Father said he didn't think being a king meant sending army troops to a whole different land and having them shoot at us. Mother's more of a loyalist and Father's more of a Patriot. Well he is a patriot. A very strong one. Anyway they argued about that for a while then I fell asleep. Now Father's leaving for the meeting. I suddenly realize that if there is a battle I might never see him again. I'll worry a lot. I'll write tomorrow.

Sincerely

Abigail
